MILITARY PROGRAM

FOREWORD

All cadets at Chamberlain-Hunt Academy share in the Christian, the academic and the military aspects of the program. Many also engage in athletic and music activities.

The following pages provide a brief glimpse into the life and surroundings at our Academy. They will serve as reminders of many interesting incidents and happy associations.

Expansion of facilities and increasing the cadet enrollment are not of themselves end objectives. But through them we are accomplishing greater success at Chamberlain-Hunt Academy.

Life and survival were described by Darwin as a struggle for existence. The organism must withstand all the hardships of nature. Transformation from boyhood into Christian manhood is also a major struggle. Today the boy is confronted with innumerable invitations and temptations that interfere with his wholesome maturity into a desirable citizen. We of this staff are individually dedicated to giving a guiding word or helping hand to those experiencing that need.

Very cordially,

David F. Gruchy
President

I would like to see Chamberlain-Hunt Academy become the best college-preparatory school of the Mid-South; its faculty dedicated to the education of young men; and the boys attracted to this campus unafraid of constructive mental labor. I would like to be able to recommend our graduates to the best colleges in the land, knowing that they were able to compete with the top students from other first-rate secondary schools.

George Z. Alden
Headmaster

The Commandant

MR. GUY RUDDLE

Graduate Millington Central H.S., Millington, Tenn. 1930. Attended Union University, Jackson Tenn., and University of Shanghai, Shanghai, China.

Entered U.S. Marine Corps 1933. Served in China, Japan, and Guam. Served in South Pacific during World War II, Korea during Korean War, and many Marine Corps Posts on East and West Coast, U.S.

Retired from U.S. Marine Corps on 30 June 1957 with the rank of Sergeant Major.

The military program is a part of the curriculum for every cadet at C. H. A. and includes primarily basic military skills and courtesies. This program is not intended to produce professionally trained soldiers. Those cadets who prove themselves capable and reliable are promoted to places of leadership in the organization and help with various details of the daily program. It is felt that a military department, properly administered, is conducive to the development of many traits which are desirable in the growing boy. Neatness, punctuality, respect for authority, willingness to take responsibility, patriotism to country, and many other qualities are encouraged by military training. In addition to this aspect of the boy's development, it is also true that the knowledge acquired will be a tremendous asset to those who later enter military service.
